PREFACE

This practice book is designed for second-year students of the Institute of Computer Technologies.

The purpose of the practice book is to facilitate students master-ing the special terminology when studying computer disciplines in the English language, on the first hand, and to enhance students' knowledge of the language, on the other.

The practice book has three sections with base texts: "Computer Networks", "The Internet" and "Supplementary reading". These texts are exhaustively elaborated with a system of exercises. Some texts are divided into two parts. Each part of the text is preceded by a group of exercises built on the basis of the speech patterns that are met in this part of the text. After the text, another group of exercises aimed at both enhancing special knowledge and improving language skills is given.

Besides, the practice book contains texts for supplementary reading on the Internet and e-mail language that are widely used nowa-days. The texts are taken from original sources. Each text is followed by a detailed vocabulary, with the words arranged in the order of occur-rence in the text. A diverse system of exercises that is presented after each text is conducive to developing lexical, grammar, and communica-tive habits and skills.
