

		organizations of any ownership positions related to administrative and managerial or administrative and economic responsibilities, or perform such obligations under the special powers
4	Public officials	heads and deputy heads of public authorities and their apparatus, and other civil servants, commissioned with organizational and administrative, consultative and regulatory functions which are admitted in laws or other legal acts

It should be noted that all the officers mentioned above have an authority known as 'empowerment' that is a formal legal right of a public official to make decisions, give orders, and allocate resources to achieve the desired organizational results. It can cause such economic crimes as: corruption (activities of persons authorized to perform state functions, aimed at misuse of their powers to obtain material goods, services, benefits or other privileges); abuse of authority (activity of a civil servant who has no imperative powers and functions and goes beyond his powers during the implementation of his administrative and economic functions.

Kirill Reshetar

Fourth-Year Student

Institute of Information Diagnostic Systems

National Aviation University (Kyiv)

ESP Supervisor: O.H. Shostak, PhD, Assoc. Prof.

CYBER CULTURE & E-COMMUNICATION

The Internet and electronic communication (also called computer mediated communications, or CMC) do not mean only new tools for communication; they mean new ways to communicate. Today organizations interact with various constituents (employees, board members, customers, partners and others) differently — depending upon the nature of the message, the goals they try to