Content of the lecture

1. Concept and subject of Roman private law

The subject of study of the course "Roman private law" is the system of legal norms of ancient Rome, which regulated social relations between private individuals, namely:

- the set of personal rights, the legal position of subjects in property relations, the ability of subjects to carry out agreements of a property nature;
- issues of legal protection of private rights;
- marital and family relations;
- relations related to property and other rights to things;
- obligations of subjects that arise from various grounds: contracts, offenses, allegedly from contracts, allegedly from offenses;
- the range of issues that arise in connection with the inheritance of the property of the deceased, etc.

2. The system of Roman law

Roman law in ancient Rome is a complex legal phenomenon that consisted of three legal systems:

- jus civile – civil law;
- jus gentium – the law of nations;
- jus praetorium – praetorian law
